Cubs Present
Circus Program

Cub Pack 703-C recently held the final pack meeting of the current school year in the Carl Steele cafeteria.

With "circus" as a theme, the Cubs interpreted familiar "big top" characters and presented a sideshow display for entertainment of the parents. Balloons and candy suckers were distributed to all little children by Den 3, in charge of Jackie Ockerman and Bonnie Lane.

In a colorful Indian ceremony, Robert Golden presented Weble Freeman Lewis Jr., with the symbolic arrow of light, giving him the distinction of being the first Weble to be graduated from this pack into a Boy Scout troop. In contrast to this ceremony was the formal induction of Mark Kagan into the Cub Pack as a bobcat.

Announcements were made of summer plans including two picnics, a scheduled field trip tour of a deluxe ocean liner, and fund raising activities. Indoor pack meetings will be resumed at the beginning of the fall school term.

Have Polyethylene
bag ...
Will travel

A goldfish's life is not an easy one. Hungry cats, careless kids, and forgetful adults are hazards the average run-of-the-stream goldfish puts up with every day.

His troubles begin in a tank in a pet store, aquarium, or five-and-ten. There's no privacy, the food is just average—and eventually a net cuts the surface of the water and heads for him. In the resulting splash and panic, a goldfish can get hurt.

Fortunately, that danger has been eliminated recently for many goldfish by a new development: fish in bags. They're carefully put into polyethylene bags filled with water. Food is added, along with an oxygen-producing chemical, and the bag is sealed. Bags are displayed, and buyers can make—and take home—their choice.

The same qualities that enable polyethylene to hold live goldfish without damage make it ideal for other delicate jobs. It's used to protect phonograph records, electronic equipment, and bunches of grapes. Matter of fact, you'll find it just about everywhere—wrapped around everything. It's one of the products made in Torrance by the men and women of CARBIDE.
